

BMC West & Logging on Mt. Hood National Forest

BMC West sells products from companies such as Freres Lumber, Rosboro Lumber and Hampton Tree Farms — all of which purchase controversial sales in the Mt. Hood National Forest. By purchasing these products and supporting these companies, BMC West supports the destruction of our last native forests. We call on BMC West to take advantage of sustainably harvested alternatives and stop handling products from endangered forests, including US public lands.

Bars ATV sale in the Oak Grove Watershed of Mt. Hood National Forest, logged by Hampton Tree Farms. Hampton Products are sold in BMC West store locations.

Chain of Custody: Mt. Hood Timber Sale to Logging Company to Mill to Distributor to a store near you!

Freres Lumber

Over the last ten years, Freres lumber has logged more acres of Mt. Hood National Forest than any other active timber company. Freres Lumber is notorious for their disregard for community and ecosystem health. In 1999, the vice president of Freres Lumber publicly opposed the Salem City Council's resolution against logging in their drinking watershed. Most recently Freres Lumber purchased the highly controversial Solo and Cub timber sales. Together these sales will log over 300 acres of mature and old growth forest on our public lands.

Rosboro Lumber is one of the top 5 companies logging public lands in Oregon and Washington, and one of the top 5 loggers in Mt. Hood National Forest. They have purchased many controversial sales in the Oak Grove Watershed.

BMC West is one of the largest retail lumberyards in North America. They profit from the destruction of forests from Chile to Alaska.

There are currently nearly 60 timber sales being planned or logged in the Mt. Hood National Forest.

Contact the BMC West store nearest you and ask them to stop selling products from companies logging US Public Lands: www.bmcwest.com